History made as Bradford becomes home to the first Commonwealth War Memorial outside of London

Bradford has made history with the unveiling of the first Commonwealth War Memorial outside of London.

Unveiled on Wednesday 6th November, the new memorial beside the Bradford Cenotaph, provides a lasting tribute to the bravery of the 5.1 million men and women from across the Commonwealth who joined the World War One and World War Two efforts.

Some 1.2 million soldiers came from what are now known as India, Pakistan and Bangladesh during the First World War, in answer to the call 'Your Empire Needs You' - including at least 400,000 Muslim soldiers serving in the British Indian Army.

Empowering a generation

KORT's unwavering commitment to support education in Azad Jammu Kashmir

Kashmir Orphans Relief Trust (KORT) with support of One Nation UK continues its unwavering commitment to supporting education in Azad Jammu & Kashmir (AJK).

Through the "Education for All AJK" project, KORT proudly distributed essential educational resources, including school bags, uniforms, stationery, and shoes, to underprivileged students. This included both boys and girls schools across Naka Kharrak in Mirpur, Red Village in Jandrot and Salohi Mandhol - all in Azad Kashmir.

A KORT spokesperson said: "These supplies are more than just materials; they are tools of empowerment and empowering young minds today means creating leaders for tomorrow.

"At KORT, we remain dedicated to our mission of building a better tomorrow for AJK's children.

"We are deeply grateful to our partners at One Nation UK for their continued support in making this dream a reality.

"At KORT we pay special focus on girls' education, ensuring equal opportunities for all, as we strive to create an inclusive environment where every child can flourish.

"Together, we are not just giving out resources, we are nurturing futures and empowering a new generation!"

Ch Mohammed Akhtar, Chairman for KORT said: "Education breaks the cycle of poverty and desperation and it allows the children to look forward to a bright future with good careers.

"It is a very serious and difficult issue as a country cannot move forward until and unless most of its citizens are above the poverty line."

Yet, a report by Commonwealth War Graves commission found that hundreds and thousands of black and South Asian troops have not been commemorated in the same way as their white comrades.

The unveiling aligns with Bradford's designation as the City of Culture, further solidifying the city's commitment to celebrating its diverse heritage and fostering a legacy of remembrance.

The design of the Commonwealth War Memorial, carefully crafted to reflect both history and unity, has been led by Landscape Architect Saira Ali.

Saira said: "Creating this memorial was an honour. We aimed to design a space that not only reflects the deep respect we hold for the Commonwealth troops but also serves as a place of peace and remembrance for all.

"It reinforces our commitment to remembering and uniting communities around shared sacrifices.

"The Memorial Garden in which it stands offers a quiet, reflective environment, where the beauty of nature complements the solemnity of the monument."

Saira worked closely with Mahmood Mohammed, Bradford's Safer Communities Lead, and who emphasised the memorial's broader significance for local cohesion: "This marks a historic moment for Bradford," he said.

"The unveiling of the Commonwealth War Memorial outside London is a testament to the profound contributions of soldiers from across the Commonwealth."

The Commonwealth Secretariat stated: "The Bradford Commonwealth war memorial stands as a poignant testament to soldiers from across Commonwealth countries, who united in the pursuit of peace and freedom. By recognising and remembering them, we will continue to strengthen our shared values and commitment to building a better world."

The Lord Mayor of Bradford, Cllr

Bev Mullaney, led the ceremony, alongside Lord Lieutenant of West Yorkshire Ed Anderson, a representative from Commonwealth office and World War Two veteran Jack Crawford.

Cllr Mullaney said: "This is incredibly important for us as a city and district to recognise and remember the service and sacrifice of those who contributed to the UK's war efforts from Commonwealth countries."

The unveiling marks a momentous occasion for Bradford, enhancing the city's legacy as a place of shared heritage and collective memory. As a central focal point for remembrance events in the district, the Commonwealth War Memorial will help foster a deeper understanding of our diverse past and the sacrifices made for our future.

Cllr Kamran Hussain, Portfolio Holder for Neighbourhoods and Community Safety, said: "This memorial is not just a symbol of remembrance but also one of unity, bringing together people from all backgrounds to honour a shared history. It stands as a powerful reminder of the strength that comes from our diverse communities."

It is also hoped that it has a role in educating schoolchildren on the fact that people from diverse cultures and backgrounds were involved in the First and Second World Wars.

In recent days, there has been a significant pushback from numerous community figureheads stressing the importance of overdue recognition of the historic contributions of black and South Asian soldiers who fought for Britain in the world wars.

Campaigners are calling for the contributions of Asian troops to be included in schools as part of the national curriculum. This, they say will help in educating the role of Asians, and that of Muslims to British war efforts, helping tackle Islamophobia. Research conducted by British Future discovered that only 1 in 5 people know about the Muslim contribution, and almost nobody (2%) is aware of the scale of their involvement.

One million from criminals to keep West Yorkshire safe Organisations across West Yorkshire are being urged to apply for the latest round of the Mayor's Safer Communities Fund. It has already seen more than £3million awarded to a range of projects since 2021.

This grant round will help to deliver the Mayor's new Police and Crime Plan 2024-28 covering priorities, which include: keeping people safe, safer places and thriving communities, supporting victims and witnesses.

Mayor of West Yorkshire, Tracy Brabin said: "This money will make a real difference, helping us to keep our communities safe.

"I'm so proud that we've been able to use this cash seized from criminals to fund so many amazing groups and organisations over the years.

"I cannot wait to see which innovative projects come forward this time around, and the impact they will have on the ground."

The money is made available largely thanks to the efforts of West Yorkshire Police's Economic Crime Unit, which is responsible for tracking down criminal ill-gotten gains through offences such as fraud and drug dealing.

With this latest round of funding, organisations can apply for a grant. The fund will also be open to projects which will deliver the 'build' element of Clear, Hold, Build (CHB) in four Home Office pilot areas across West Yorkshire.

CHB is a framework designed to improve the local response to tackling serious and organised crime threats, and groups delivering in BD3 in Bradford, Park Ward in Calderdale, Harehills in Leeds, and Ashbrow in Kirklees are encouraged to apply.

Organisations must apply for a grant by midday on 13th December. Full terms and conditions, including more information on the priorities and how to apply, are available on the West Yorkshire Combined Authority website.

Humanity is being erased in Gaza

NRC's Jan Egeland says he "witnessed the almost unparalleled suffering of families"

In a statement by the Secretary General of the Norwegian Refugee Council (NRC), following his visit to Gaza, Lebanon, and Syria, Jan Egeland said:

"The shockwaves from Israel's ongoing and indiscriminate warfare on Gaza and Lebanon are reverberating across this entire region. Neither the horrific assault on Israeli civilians on 7 October 2023, nor the indiscriminate missiles launched by militant groups from Lebanon, can justify the degree of destruction on civilian lives and infrastructure in the region that I have witnessed in recent days.

We cannot wait another day for an end to this senseless violence. For the sake of children across the entire region, diplomacy must result in a sustainable ceasefire.

The people I have met in recent days—from those in Gaza City, to the displaced in eastern Lebanon, to those crossing into Syria—longed for peace so they could return home. Children spoke of how much they missed school and their friends, and parents wished for an end to the precarity and suffering that displacement has brought.

The suffering of millions cannot begin to end until those in power push for peace and take action to end the violence.

What I witnessed in Gaza was a society shattered by advanced weaponry, with ongoing military strikes relentlessly impacting the civilian population. War has rules, and it is clear that the Israeli campaign has been conducted with utter disregard for international humanitarian law.

As Gaza has been reduced to rubble, Western leaders have largely stood by unwilling to apply the necessary pressure on the stronger party, Israel, to stop starving the population that they are besieging and bombarding.

In Lebanon, I met people who in just a couple of weeks have lost their homes, jobs and everything in between. They are now staying in almost bare shelters that offer neither protection nor privacy, in fear that the worst is yet to come. The temperature has dropped substantially. People are ill-prepared for what promises to be the coldest winter season for the hundreds of thousands displaced.

Travelling into Syria from Lebanon via the Masnaa border crossing, I saw the huge challenges facing those fleeing violence in Lebanon, exacerbated by vast craters in the road caused by Israeli strikes. Displaced people must be provided with safe passage, shelter, and services.

Those fleeing into Syria arrive in a country with deep, pre-existing economic and humanitarian crises. NRC is providing support to those arriving in Syria, people who took the impossible decision to leave their homes while facing bombardment, and left with only what they could carry. The aid we and others are currently able to provide is totally insufficient for the needs our staff are seeing. We must be given the right to independently monitor how those who flee from Lebanon to Syria are treated. There must be robust international support to meet people forced to flee, and there must be a genuine, re-energised diplomatic effort from all sides, to halt violence against civilians.

My visit started in Gaza, continued in Lebanon, and finished in Syria, tracing the fallout of this now regional conflict. At each point, the people I met said they wished for only one thing: peace."

Islamophobia is Britain's 'blind spot'

Founder of the Professional Muslim Institute (PMI), Dr Javed Bashir

Baroness Sayeeda Warsi will be keynote speaker at Professional Muslim Institute event

Every November, Islamophobia Awareness Month (IAM) focuses on raising awareness and promoting understanding of the discrimination and challenges faced by Muslim communities.

Founded by advocacy organisations and supported by educational institutions, local councils, and community groups, IAM aims to counter stereotypes, dispel misinformation, and foster more inclusive, united communities.

This year, Baroness Sayeeda Warsi will serve as the keynote speaker at the Professional Muslim Institute (PMI) networking dinner on Thursday, 28th November, at Aagrah Midpoint in Bradford.

"Baroness Warsi will discuss her powerful new book, 'Muslims Don't Matter'," says Dr. Javed Bashir, founder of PMI.

"As Britain's first Muslim Cabinet minister, Baroness Warsi brings a bold and unique perspective on Islamophobia in modern Britain.

"Through personal reflections and political insights, she critiques the rising anti-Muslim sentiment and urges a unified response to this growing prejudice."

In 'Muslims Don't Matter', Baroness Warsi highlights the tragic rise in anti-Muslim racism, including the recent murders of three Muslim grandfathers - each targeted solely for their faith.

She examines the far-right violence, the summer riots of 2024, and the surge of public hostility toward Muslims during the Gaza conflict, illustrating how Islamophobia has become normalised across media, politics, and entertainment.

"Warsi describes Islamophobia as Britain's 'blind spot' and one of the last acceptable forms of bigotry, perpetuated by divisive narratives from commentators, think tanks, and other influential voices," Dr. Bashir adds.

Reflecting on these alarming trends, Warsi poses a critical question for British Muslims: "Should we still call Britain home?" Dr. Bashir shares that she will explore the impacts of this prejudice and emphasise the urgent need for unity, understanding, and collective action against the rising tide of hate.

"This event promises a crucial conversation about British Muslim identity, resilience, and the shared fight for a more inclusive and just society," adds Dr. Bashir.

"Attendees will gain insights from one of the leading voices against Islamophobia and connect with other professionals committed to fostering unity and inclusivity."

Dr. Bashir further notes that "Islamophobia", or prejudice against Islam and Muslims, is rooted in historical, social, and political factors that have shaped public perceptions.

"Often, it manifests as misconceptions that link Islam unfairly to extremism or violence, despite the overwhelming majority of Muslims practicing their faith peacefully.

"Islamophobia affects nearly every aspect of life for Muslims, from employment and education to safety and freedom of expression.

"Media portrayals significantly contribute to these stereotypes," Dr. Bashir explains.

"Many individuals form their understanding of Islam through television and print media, which often emphasise sensationalised stories that portray Islam negatively.

"Islamophobia Awareness Month seeks to address these issues by promoting narratives that accurately represent Muslim communities and their valuable contributions to society."

The dinner is ticketed and by prior booking only, for more information please email: pniukorg@gmail.com

Thousands of lives could be saved thanks to the roll-out of an improved anti-smoking pill on the NHS in England, the head of the health service will announce today.

Varenicline has been shown to work as well as vapes to help people stop smoking and be a more effective aid than nicotine-replacement gum or patches.

The daily pill is now set to be offered by the NHS to tens of thousands of smokers each year in England to provide another option to help them quit.

The drug works by reducing cravings for nicotine and blocking its effect on the brain, while also helping with withdrawal symptoms such as

'Stop-smoking' pill to help tens of thousands quit feeling irritable or having difficulty sleeping.

When used alongside behavioural support, such as counselling, the treatment has been shown to help around one in four people to stop smoking for at least six months.

Alongside government efforts to create a smokefree generation, NHS chief executive Amanda Pritchard will say the move to provide varenicline comes as part of a major NHS drive to make more effective treatment options available for patients while delivering over £500m in savings for the taxpayer.

It is estimated the use of varenicline on the NHS could help over 85,000 people try to stop smoking each year and its use over the next five years could prevent up to 9,500 smoking-related deaths, according to research by University College London.

The drug will now provide an additional treatment option for patients in England through NHS Stop Smoking Services, and other potential options are on the near horizon with a second drug (cytisine) currently under review by the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence (NICE).

The treatment is being made available through a collaboration between NHS England and pharmaceutical company Teva UK, who have agreed to provide a new generic version of the treatment to the NHS.

A branded version of the smoking cessation pill (Champix®) was previously used but was withdrawn in 2021 as a precaution after an impurity was discovered – however the relaunched generic product has now been approved as safe by the Medicines Health and Regulatory Authority (MHRA).

More than £60,000 worth of illegal cigarettes, hand-rolling tobacco and vapes have been taken off the streets following continued partnership work in the Harehills area of Leeds.

Last month, retail premises in the area were visited over a two-day period by police and Trading Standards.

£62,796.80 worth of items were seized, including 2,582 packets of illicit cigarettes, 85 bags of hand-rolling tobacco and 1,185 illegal vapes.

As part of the operation over £25,000 worth of cannabis was seized with one suspect arrested and currently under investigation.

The enforcement activity was part of the CommUnity Harehills project, which is based on the Clear, Hold, Build (CHB) initiative to tackle serious and organised crime.

Acting Sergeant Kody Bradley, Lead for CommUnity Harehills, said: "This two-day operation is just part of the continued work we are doing with partners to make long-lasting positive change for those living and working in Harehills.

"I hope the community are reassured by the efforts that are being made to disrupt organised criminality and pursue those who profit from causing harm to others.

"I would urge people to support us in our work as part of CommUnity Harehills. Local residents have a big part to play in reporting their concerns and any information they have about organised crime activity, illegal

Over £60,000 of illegal cigarettes and vapes seized in Harehills activities or anti-social behaviour."

Linda Davis, Head of Trading Standards (Protecting Communities), said: "Partnership working is key in keeping our local communities safe. The supply of illicit tobacco is far from being a victimless crime, those involved are often organised criminal groups with links to drugs, modern slavery and other illegal activities, and its ready availability makes it easier for children to start smoking.

"I would encourage anyone with information about the supply of cheap and illicit tobacco to continue to report, to reduce the harm caused by tobacco in our communities."

In addition to the work with Trading Standards, officers from the neighbourhood policing team were also joined by other agencies including licensing, police dog unit and the Driving and Vehicle Standards Agency (DVSA).

DVSA, the Serious Environmental Crime Team at Leeds City Council and the Neighbourhood Policing Team inspected 12 vehicles, with many of these having defects so serious they were immediately prohibited. This included non-operating parking brakes, tyres below the legal limit and down to the cord, detached suspension and a seriously corroded chassis. Numerous reports for summons and vehicle tickets were issued as part of this partnership approach to keeping roads safer.

"The supply of illicit tobacco is far from being a victimless crime, those involved are often organised criminal groups with links to drugs, modern slavery and other illegal activities."

Nadiya Hussain launches new 'Where there's water' appeal for WaterAid

TV chef and WaterAid ambassador Nadiya Hussain MBE has launched the international charity's 'Where there's water' winter appeal, helping raise vital funds to turn on the taps in communities in Malawi and around the world and build a brighter future.

The mother of three, who has supported WaterAid since 2016, saw first-hand the impact a lack of clean water can have on families during her childhood trips to visit her grandparents in Bangladesh.

She's said remembering the trips leaves her 'in disbelief but better equipped' to teach her children about the global water crisis and how they can work towards a better world together.

Nearly one in ten people around the world do not have clean water close to home and without it a ripple of problems can occur. Women and children spend hours collecting dirty water, often missing out on school or the chance to earn a living, and families can lose loved ones to deadly diseases like cholera.

But the ripple can go both ways. Where there's water children can go to school, businesses can thrive, and communities can live free from the constant threat of disease.

Nadiya Hussain, cook, author and TV presenter said: "Having clean water at home is so essential, it's easy to take it for granted. But for the one in ten people across the world who don't have clean water close to home, even simple things like pouring a glass of water, preparing food, or having a shower are an everyday challenge.

"Worldwide, women and girls spend 200 million hours every day collecting water. Precious time is wasted walking for water instead of focussing on schoolwork; days are spent sick or caring for family fighting waterborne diseases instead of earning a living."

"Worldwide, women and girls spend 200 million hours every day collecting water. Precious time is wasted walking for water instead of focussing on schoolwork; days are spent sick or caring for family fighting waterborne diseases instead of earning a living.

"Every mother wants to give their children the best opportunities in life. No one should have to worry about putting their family at risk while doing something as essential as using water. This is why I'm helping launch WaterAid's 'Where there's water' appeal, because where there's water there's good health; where there's water, there's opportunity; where there's water, there's a way."

In Malawi, almost one in three people lack clean water close to home. As a result, families spend on average 55 minutes per day collecting water.

But in Chinganji, southern Malawi, young sisters Fanny and Merifa no longer have to wake up extra early before school to collect dirty water as they have had a water tap installed nearby. Now they have time to study at school and do what they really love: singing. They have also set up their own business making samosas to sell, helping provide an income for her family.

Chief Superintendent retires after 28 years in the force

How many police officers do you know who have featured in an exhibition about Ladybird books and one at the Bosworth Battlefield Heritage Centre; been the chair of two staff networks; been a hostage negotiator for 12 years; climbed Snowdon, the Three Peaks Challenge and Light the Lakes with her work colleagues; been named Probationer of the Year; Beat Bobby of the Year, Civil Servant of the Year Award and been awarded the Queen's Police Medal for Distinguished Service (QPM)?

Only one person – Chief Superintendent Manjit Atwal who's retired after 28-years in the force.

To list everything that Manjit has achieved in her career would fill a book so it is only possible to capture a few highlights.

Manjit joined the police in 1996. She had moved to Leicestershire from Derbyshire.

She had originally planned to go into nursing and got into Leicester Nursing School but, due to culture clashes with the family she married into, she was unable to take up the post.

However, after going to a police recruitment event with a friend she had a new plan. "The recruiting sergeant asked me how I was going to cope on night shifts with two young children, and that just made me more determined to prove that I could do it," says Manjit.

Manjit was one of the first Sikh woman to work for the force and retires as one of the highest-ranking Sikh female police officers in the UK.

She is currently on secondment to the College of Policing where she is the Strategic Lead for Violence Against Women and Girls and Op Soteria - the national programme to improve the police service's response to rape and serious sexual offences.

She continues: "I have always thought the Sikh beliefs of equality, honesty, humility and 'seva,' which

University develops unique career learning tool

Students at the University of Huddersfield are being given an employability boost thanks to a new and powerful career learning tool developed by the institution.

Available exclusively to current students, Graduate Career Explorer is an intuitive tool that uses AI to help show students the breadth of careers their degree can lead to and where those jobs are geographically.

It allows users to easily widen their options, see which job titles to use in their career search and to weigh up the benefits of commuting.

The unique resource has been developed by the University of Huddersfield in partnership with Lightcast, a leader in labour market analytics, for the benefit of its students and is a major innovation that will support students in developing employability.

As a new way to undertake career planning, the tool harnesses Lightcast’s job market data and transforms it into an interactive dashboard that can help answer students’ questions.

Students can search by school, course, career focus, region and employer and can then filter that information by job title, skills, salary, employer, and location.

It searches the web and shows where jobs that match the criteria have been advertised over the last 12 months. Students can quickly see how much they could earn in any given role, which employers have been recruiting in their area and what skills to put on their CV that employers are asking for.

Searches can focus on direct routes suitable for a new graduate that are closely related to their degree subject. Or they can look at further possibilities that build on their degree, often requiring additional qualifications or experience.

The new resource was developed by a core project team from the University’s Careers and Employability Service and data analysts with support from across the institution.

Deputy Head of Careers and Employability Dave Stanbury, who led on the project, said: “Graduate Career Explorer has been a fantastic collaborative project drawing on Data Analysts, Careers staff, academics, Computing and Library Services and the Student Communications and Engagement Team.

“This has been an extraordinary journey which has seen Ben Hull’s original vision for a student-facing dashboard leading to this amazing career learning resource.”

First 'Rani Scholarships' awarded

University Chancellor makes higher education for women a reality

A scholarship launched by Chancellor of the University of Bradford Anita Rani which has made its first four awards has been supported by a major donation from software solution specialists TechnologyOne.

The Rani Scholarship was launched in December 2023 to support women who wouldn't otherwise be able to access higher education without financial support and who want to study a subject in which women are under-represented.

Three of the four students have already taken up their places, with a fourth due to start their studies next year.

TechnologyOne Executive Vice-President Leo Hanna said: "For students that don't have access to financial support from their families, higher education is increasingly more difficult to pursue.

"When the scholarship was presented to us, we thought it was a great opportunity to provide much needed support to struggling students. As a company we always strive to embed ourselves in the communities we serve and truly participate in the social fabric.

"TechnologyOne is committed to making a difference to underprivileged and at-risk youths by empowering them to transform their lives and create their own pathways to success.

"We are proud to partner with the University of Bradford to provide students with the means to ultimately change their lives. We also know that increasing gender diversity in fields with traditionally low female representation only leads to better outcomes for society, individuals and organisations."

The London-based firm, which provides software products to governments, businesses and the education sector, recently contributed to a joint report with the Higher Education Policy Institute that said parents of students who receive the minimum maintenance support would have to contribute nearly £14,000-a-year to ensure their children have an acceptable standard of living while studying.

Anita Rani, who is known for her work on BBC Radio 4 Woman's Hour and as a presenter on BBC TV and radio, said: "I'm thrilled that TechnologyOne is supporting the Rani Scholarship, because each scholarship will change the trajectory of each woman's life.

"This is about opportunity; it's about giving women from disadvantaged backgrounds a chance they otherwise might not have had.

"Higher education provides so many rich experiences, while at the same time broadening your horizons, so these scholarships will empower recipients to find their path and follow their dreams. I sincerely thank TechnologyOne for joining us on this journey."

"TechnologyOne is committed to making a difference to underprivileged and at-risk youths by empowering them to transform their lives and create their own pathways to success."

Abu Bakr supermarket opens new flagship site in Batley

Batley has become home to a new halal supermarket, which has just opened its doors to the public, and this grand enterprise offers everything you could possibly need for putting on a feast.

Standing proud in a custom-renovated 12,000 square-foot site, with its own customer parking, the latest flagship Abu Bakr supermarket in Blakeridge Mill Shopping Centre, Batley, offers the ultimate food and groceries shopping experience.

The new state-of-the art Abu Bakr has taken one-year to complete from concept, and features continental and world foods and ingredients, fresh groceries, a custom-built butchery, in-house bakery, and even has homewares department.

The new site also features Abu Bakr's innovative 'food-to-go counter', with a wide selection of vegetarian, meat, chicken and fish curries, sundries, street food ready for the customer to have packed up and take home. Perfect for those with busy lifestyles!

Friends, family, business associates, special guests and members of the local community came out to support, and witness the grand opening on Tuesday 29th October.

Brothers Abid, Sajid and Wajid Hussain - the men at the helm of the Abu Bakr Supermarkets enterprise, were joined by the next generation of the family who are playing an instrumental role in the growing success of the grocery chain.

With Batley now the fifth store in the Abu Bakr Supermarket portfolio, the grocery chain, last year, celebrated 50-years of success.

The story began when the late Chawdry

Mohammed Aslam and his brothers set up their very first humble grocery store in Keighley in the 1970s; the business expanded as Mr Aslam's eldest son Abid Hussain (fondly known as Brother Abid) brought Abu Baker to Hilltop Avenue in Leeds.

Brother Abid now runs five supermarkets with his brother Sajid and Wajid across Yorkshire, each site known as the local 'go-to' for fresh produce, spices and halal meats.

The success of Abu Bakr? 'Respect and unity', says eldest brother Brother Abid, firmly.

"At Hilltop Avenue in 1981, my father and I brought the business to Leeds. Beginning as a fish & chip shop, we ran an extended arm of a halal butchery and fresh groceries," explains Brother Abid.

"Being in the heart of the south Asian communities, we quickly became a household name, leading us to move to a bigger premises on Roundhay Road in 2004, and then expanding by opening more sites in Leeds – Queen's Road in Hyde Park, Dewsbury Road in Beeston, Kirkstall Road and now Batley.

"The new flagship supermarket in Batley is the latest jewel in the crown for us.

"Success isn't about how much money you make, it's about the difference you make to peoples lives," insists big brother Abid Hussain.

"My younger brothers, Sajid and Wajid are my arms," adds Brother Abid.

"Despite any challenges we may have had, without doubt we have overcome them because we had the prayers of our parents, are united as a family working as a team, always."

Brother Abid is widely-accepted as one of Leeds' south Asian community champions, earning him respect across and beyond postcodes.

He'll often be seen at charity events, assisting in local homeless feeds and donating food products to charities for food parcels to be distributed among the city's struggling families on the poverty line. He's also personally gone out to deliver aid and create water wells and install water pipes in countries such as Africa, Pakistan and beyond.

From the 28-day dry-aged premium beef to the show-stopping Etcı Special Fillet Mignon prepared tableside with live flambé demonstrations, and not forgetting their sensational famous Turkish Baklava, there's something to delight every palate.

Founded in Istanbul in 2012 by Mehmet and Mustafa (affectionately known as Baba), Etcı Mehmet launched its first UK restaurant in Manchester, which instantly became the city's hottest dining spot.

Followed by openings in Riyadh, Birmingham, Liverpool, Doha and Casablanca. Now, with its arrival in Leeds, the restaurant has fast become a firm favourite among locals and visitors alike.

Their UK brand has rapidly risen to a high-profile premium favourite, attracting loyal and regular guests including celebrities and sports stars.

Etcı Mehmet has a unique way of bringing people together in their relaxed yet vibrant restaurants. They have created the perfect place to enjoy a delicious lunch, dinner with friends and celebrations for the whole family to enjoy, with the warmth of their hospitality.

Operations Director Amine el Gueddar commented: "We are thrilled to have continued our UK expansion. Leeds has been cooking for a long time and was the next natural destination."

Alterations To Rented Property - Pitfalls

In commercial leases or residential tenancy agreements there is typically a clause prohibiting the lessee or tenant from making any alterations to the property without the landlord’s consent, such consent not to be unreasonably withheld by the landlord. The case of Messenex Property Investments Limited v Lanark Square Limited illustrates the circumstances in which it would be reasonable for a landlord to refuse consent.

In that case the tenant occupied a four-storey mixed-use building in London under a 200-year lease. The landlord was the freehold owner of the building. The tenant wanted to make a number of alterations to the building, including adding three additional floors and converting the ground floor from offices to residential units. The lease contained a clause which prohibited the tenant from erecting any additional structure onto the building and from making any alterations to the main structure, the external appearance or layout of the building without the landlord’s consent, such consent not to be unreasonably withheld.

The parties failed to agree terms under which the landlord would grant consent and therefore the tenant applied to the Court for a Declaration that the landlord was unreasonably withholding its consent and that the tenant should be discharged from the clause in the lease requiring it to seek the landlord’s approval.

The landlord opposed the application on the grounds that:

- The tenant had failed to provide structural engineer’s drawings that the landlord had requested.
- The tenant would have to trespass across the landlord’s land to undertake the alterations.
- The tenant’s proposals were unclear.
- The tenant had not provided unconditional undertakings to pay the landlord’s costs.

Although the Court found that the trespass issue was not something which the landlord could rely on to withhold consent and that the scope of the works proposed by the tenant were sufficiently clear, it nevertheless dismissed the tenant’s application on the grounds that it had failed to provide structural engineer’s drawings and because of the tenant’s refusal to provide an undertaking to pay the landlord’s costs, failures which the Court held entitled the landlord to refuse consent for the alterations.

This case provides a useful guidance for both landlords and tenants as to how the courts will assess reasonableness when considering applications for consent to carry out alterations.

'It destroyed our marriage and swallowed £1million'

Discovering the family home had been remortgaged and credit cards maxed out in her name was the first time Saiqa [not her real name] became aware of her husband's relentless gambling addiction.

She joined a host of leading experts and shared her harrowing experience at the second annual International Interdisciplinary Colloquium of the Bristol Hub for Gambling Harms Research at the University of Bristol on Thursday on 10 October.

The Hub works closely with those with lived experience of gambling harms to raise awareness of the potential devastating consequences of gambling and to ensure that research, prevention and treatment is as relevant and effective as possible.

Saiqa's late husband's habit, which destroyed their marriage and swallowed up to £1million, resulted in him committing suicide three years ago leaving her behind with their two children.

Determined for something positive to emerge from the wreckage, she now provides peer support as an aftercare coordinator with Betknowmore UK to people experiencing gambling harms.

Saiqa, aged 53, said: "Having someone beyond family and friends to talk to during my ordeal was a lifeline. It's good to be able to offer that to others, but the fact our client list keeps growing is worrying.

“The explosion of online platforms and advertising has exacerbated the terrible situation, which means more and more lives are being lost to gambling. We were a typical hard-working family but his addiction proved too strong and the ultimate price was paid. Gambling stole from us a man who just wanted to be a hero and get everyone financially sorted. The industry had got to change now so others can be spared.”

Her husband’s refusal to acknowledge his problem and seek help meant he became increasingly locked in a vicious betting cycle, mounting up huge debts and eventually turning violent.

“It was a dark secret he kept for many years. He worked nights as a driver and it started with him going to casinos. When things shifted online, there were more options – football, other sports, roulette, slots...he did them all,” she said.

“I only found out because he was in such a mess with five credit cards maxed out to £60k, some taken out in my name. He had remortgaged the house and taken loans, so we were more than £250k in debt. Over the years it probably took a million. I went into shock and just wanted to hold everything together for the family, even though his personality changed, and he became abusive. I always tried to help but he just shunned it.”

The addiction became worse during the COVID-19 pandemic lockdown, when he would gamble online for 12-hour binges.

“He wouldn’t get washed or dressed. The four-hour cut off period to take ‘responsible rest’ is meaningless because he would simply switch to a different operator then return to the previous one. There are so many loopholes,” she said.

“We had no money for food and at one point I was holding down five different jobs doing care work and cleaning to pay the mortgage. I opened my own bank account so the bills were paid and we didn’t lose the roof over our heads.”

The final straw came when, on top of the coercive control, he became violent.

“Survival instinct kicked in and I had to focus on the children. He never admitted the problem and eventually succumbed to it completely, taking his own life. We lost so much – not just the money, but a

'Anuja'

Academy Award winner Guneet Monga Kapoor joins hands with Adam J. Graves' for powerful OSCAR-qualified short film

“‘Anuja’ connects with your heart and takes you on a beautifully heart warming journey of two young sisters with hopes of experiencing the joys of life, only to come face to face with

'Anuja' is a film about a nine-year-old orphan who quits school to work at a local garment factory, where she faces a choice that may determine her future exploitive realities.”

 Anuja was produced in partnership with the Salaam Baalak Trust (SBT), a nonprofit founded by the family of renowned director Mira Nair (Monsoon Wedding), and Shine Global, the production company behind Emmy and Academy Award-winning films such as 'War/Dance' (2007) and 'Inocente' (2012).
 Lead actress Sajda Pathan brings her own life experience to the role. She and her sister grew up living all on their own, scraping by on the streets of old Delhi. She survived by spending her days begging outside a Hanuman temple until one day social workers from SBT invited her to attend non-formal education at their center in Yamuna Bazaar.

 Adam J. Graves (Writer/Director) is a philosopher-turned-filmmaker, who holds a B.A. in South Asian studies and a Ph.D. in the Philosophy of Religion from the University of Pennsylvania. Adam is the author of The Phenomenology of Revelation and a professor of philosophy at MSU Denver, where he teaches film & philosophy. Adam wrote, directed, and produced the award-winning short film Cycle Vérité (2021) and produced and edited the documentary short The Other Side of the Sun (2024). He is married to the acclaimed visual artist Suchitra Mattai (producer of ANUJA).

Suchitra Mattai (Producer) is a multi-disciplinary artist of South Asian descent, whose work celebrates the power of women, reimagines historical narratives, and explores her family's history of indentured labor. Her works are included in the collections of the Crystal Bridges Museum of Art, the Nasher Museum of Art, the Denver Art Museum, the Tampa Museum of Art, the Joselyn Museum, the Tia Collection, the Perez Collection, the Shah Garg Collection, and the University of Michigan Museum of Art.
 This incredible short has qualified to be considered for the 2025 Oscars® after winning 'Best Live Action Short' at the 2024 HollyShorts Film Festival.

Pinnacle of luxury

Premium materials and meticulous detailing elevate this Ineos to the pinnacle of the luxury 4x4 market, setting a new benchmark in refined off-road elegance.

Where the Series II Expedition showcased a bold, rugged spirit ready for any terrain, The Grandmaster captures that same soul but with a refined, more road-focused aesthetic that embodies the OEM+ philosophy of design.

Crafted for those who favour luxury and sophistication over wilderness exploration, The Grandmaster seamlessly merges performance with elegance.

Signature exterior details, like wide wings and wheel arches, now boast a satin body finish with exposed carbon fibre accents for a subtle yet striking look. The utilitarian front and rear bumpers feature refined colour splits, creating seamless harmony with the Grenadier's original design.

This exclusive prototype also debuts a Central Roof Light with integrated LED light, drawing inspiration from Formula 1 air intakes for an aerodynamic, high-performance edge. This F1-inspired feature not only enhances functionality but also pays homage to Ineos's distinguished history within Formula 1.

Inside, the cabin has been completely reimaged with our exclusive comfort leather interior, elegantly finished in Volcanic Blue.

The bespoke Italian Nappa leather upholstery delivers a seamless blend of luxury and comfort, providing an experience as indulgent as it is refined.

The Grandmaster stands as the ultimate expression of sophistication—the most luxurious and distinguished Ineos Grenadier on the road today.

Bentley Continental GT Speed 'Most Anticipated New Vehicle for 2025'

Bentley Motors has just proudly announced that the 2025 Bentley Continental GT Speed is awarded Newsweek's prestigious Most Anticipated New Vehicle title for 2025, spotlighting Bentley's legacy of grand touring excellence and state-of-the-art design.

The fourth generation of the Continental GT Speed redefines luxury performance with its pioneering Ultra Performance Hybrid powertrain, seamlessly merging power and sustainability.

Capable of 0-60 mph in just 3.1 seconds and reaching a top speed of 208 mph, it offers thrilling performance while allowing for up to 50 miles of pure electric range. A 4.0 litre V8 engine combined with a 190 PS electric motor provides a total range of 534 miles – creating an everyday supercar.

Crafted with Bentley's hallmark artisanal excellence, the 2025 Continental GT Speed features over 46 billion different combinations, allowing owners to personalise every detail to their own tastes.

Each element, from its advanced chassis to the hand-finished interior, embodies Bentley's meticulous dedication to craftsmanship.

"We are honoured that Newsweek has recognised the Continental GT Speed as the Most Anticipated New Vehicle for 2025," said Mike Rocco, President and CEO of Bentley Americas.

"This accolade speaks to Bentley's relentless pursuit of performance, luxury, and sustainability, paving the way for a new era of grand touring."

"The boldly sophisticated Bentley Continental GT Speed is a tremendous addition to the company's lineup. Its place on Newsweek's list of Most Anticipated New Vehicles is a result of the great design, engineering, and sustainability strides Bentley has made over the last half-decade.

The muscular grand tourer can also be highly customised, which heightens its appeal," said Eileen Falkenburg-Hull, Senior Autos Editor, Newsweek.

Newsweek's annual award underscores the industry's most promising releases, recognising vehicles that excite both enthusiasts and drivers alike. This honour reinforces Bentley's leadership in luxury automotive innovation as it continues to craft a future of sustainable, refined, and extraordinary driving experiences.

F1 2025

All 10 teams and 20 drivers - plus their 2025 liveries - to feature in first-of-its-kind launch event for next season at The O2 in London on February 18; Lewis Hamilton to Ferrari among nine driver changes on the 2025 grid so far

Formula 1 will stage its first ever all-team launch featuring the grid's 20 drivers and new car liveries in an unprecedented event to open the 2025 season at The O2 in February.

The February 18 event - which will be held at the iconic London venue from 8-10pm - will mark the start of F1's 75th anniversary year and takes place eight days before the start of pre-season testing in Bahrain and just under a month before the season-opening Grand Prix in Australia on March 16.

As it stands, nine of F1's 20 race seats are changing hands for 2025 in an impending winter of major driver change - with Lewis Hamilton's switch from Mercedes to Ferrari arguably the biggest in the sport's history.

The event at The O2 will feature interviews with the sport's key players as well as live music performances and entertainment for attending fans, with tickets on sale from this Friday.

"For the first time we will bring together our fans, all 20 superstars of our sport and some very special guests to officially kick off our new season and mark our 75th year of racing," said F1 president Stefano Domenicali.

"With 2025 set to be a classic season following all the drama so far in 2024, this is a fantastic opportunity for fans of all ages to experience up-close the incredible entertainment spectacle that is Formula 1."

Such a joint launch event has long been mooted in F1 but before now not achieved. Teams have traditionally held individual launches to reveal their cars and driver line-ups ahead of pre-season's track running.

Chris Eubank launches free platform that will 'transform community fundraising forever'

With a career defined by innovation and perseverance, Eubank's latest venture is already making waves. Trust Huddle has stormed the market, attracting over 200 school PTAs and 3,000 users in just its soft launch. It's unlike anything out there - and it's only just getting started.

Chris has spent the last 18-months working closely with a team of specialists who have developed the tech software and it is now ready for growth across the UK market and beyond.

"I've always been a believer in the power of unity, and Trust Huddle is the ultimate tool for driving communities forward," Chris Eubank said.

"From sports clubs to charities and everything in between, this platform empowers people to achieve more - raising funds, communicating, and thriving together. I couldn't be more excited about changing the way communities work."

The tech was developed internally by Trust Huddle founder Paul Broadbent bringing a wealth of experience from his involvement in several high-profile projects. Paul previously led the creation of seven new brands and websites for schools within the East Midlands Academy Trust.

In addition to his work with EMAT, Paul has also played a significant role in several other noteworthy projects. He led the development of the Konexo website by Eversheds Sutherland, built on an innovative CMS platform created by his team.

Commenting on Trust Huddle's new technology, Paul Broadbent said: "Trust Huddle is an incredibly versatile tool, ideal for a wide array of communities, from school PTAs and sports clubs to towns, villages, and local parishes. It's also perfectly suited for special interest groups, social clubs, Facebook communities, charities, and even internal business communications.

"Essentially, it's a solution for any community that needs a central hub to connect, communicate, and thrive."

The platform uses automated messaging to email every member of a community and keep them updated on important news and events.

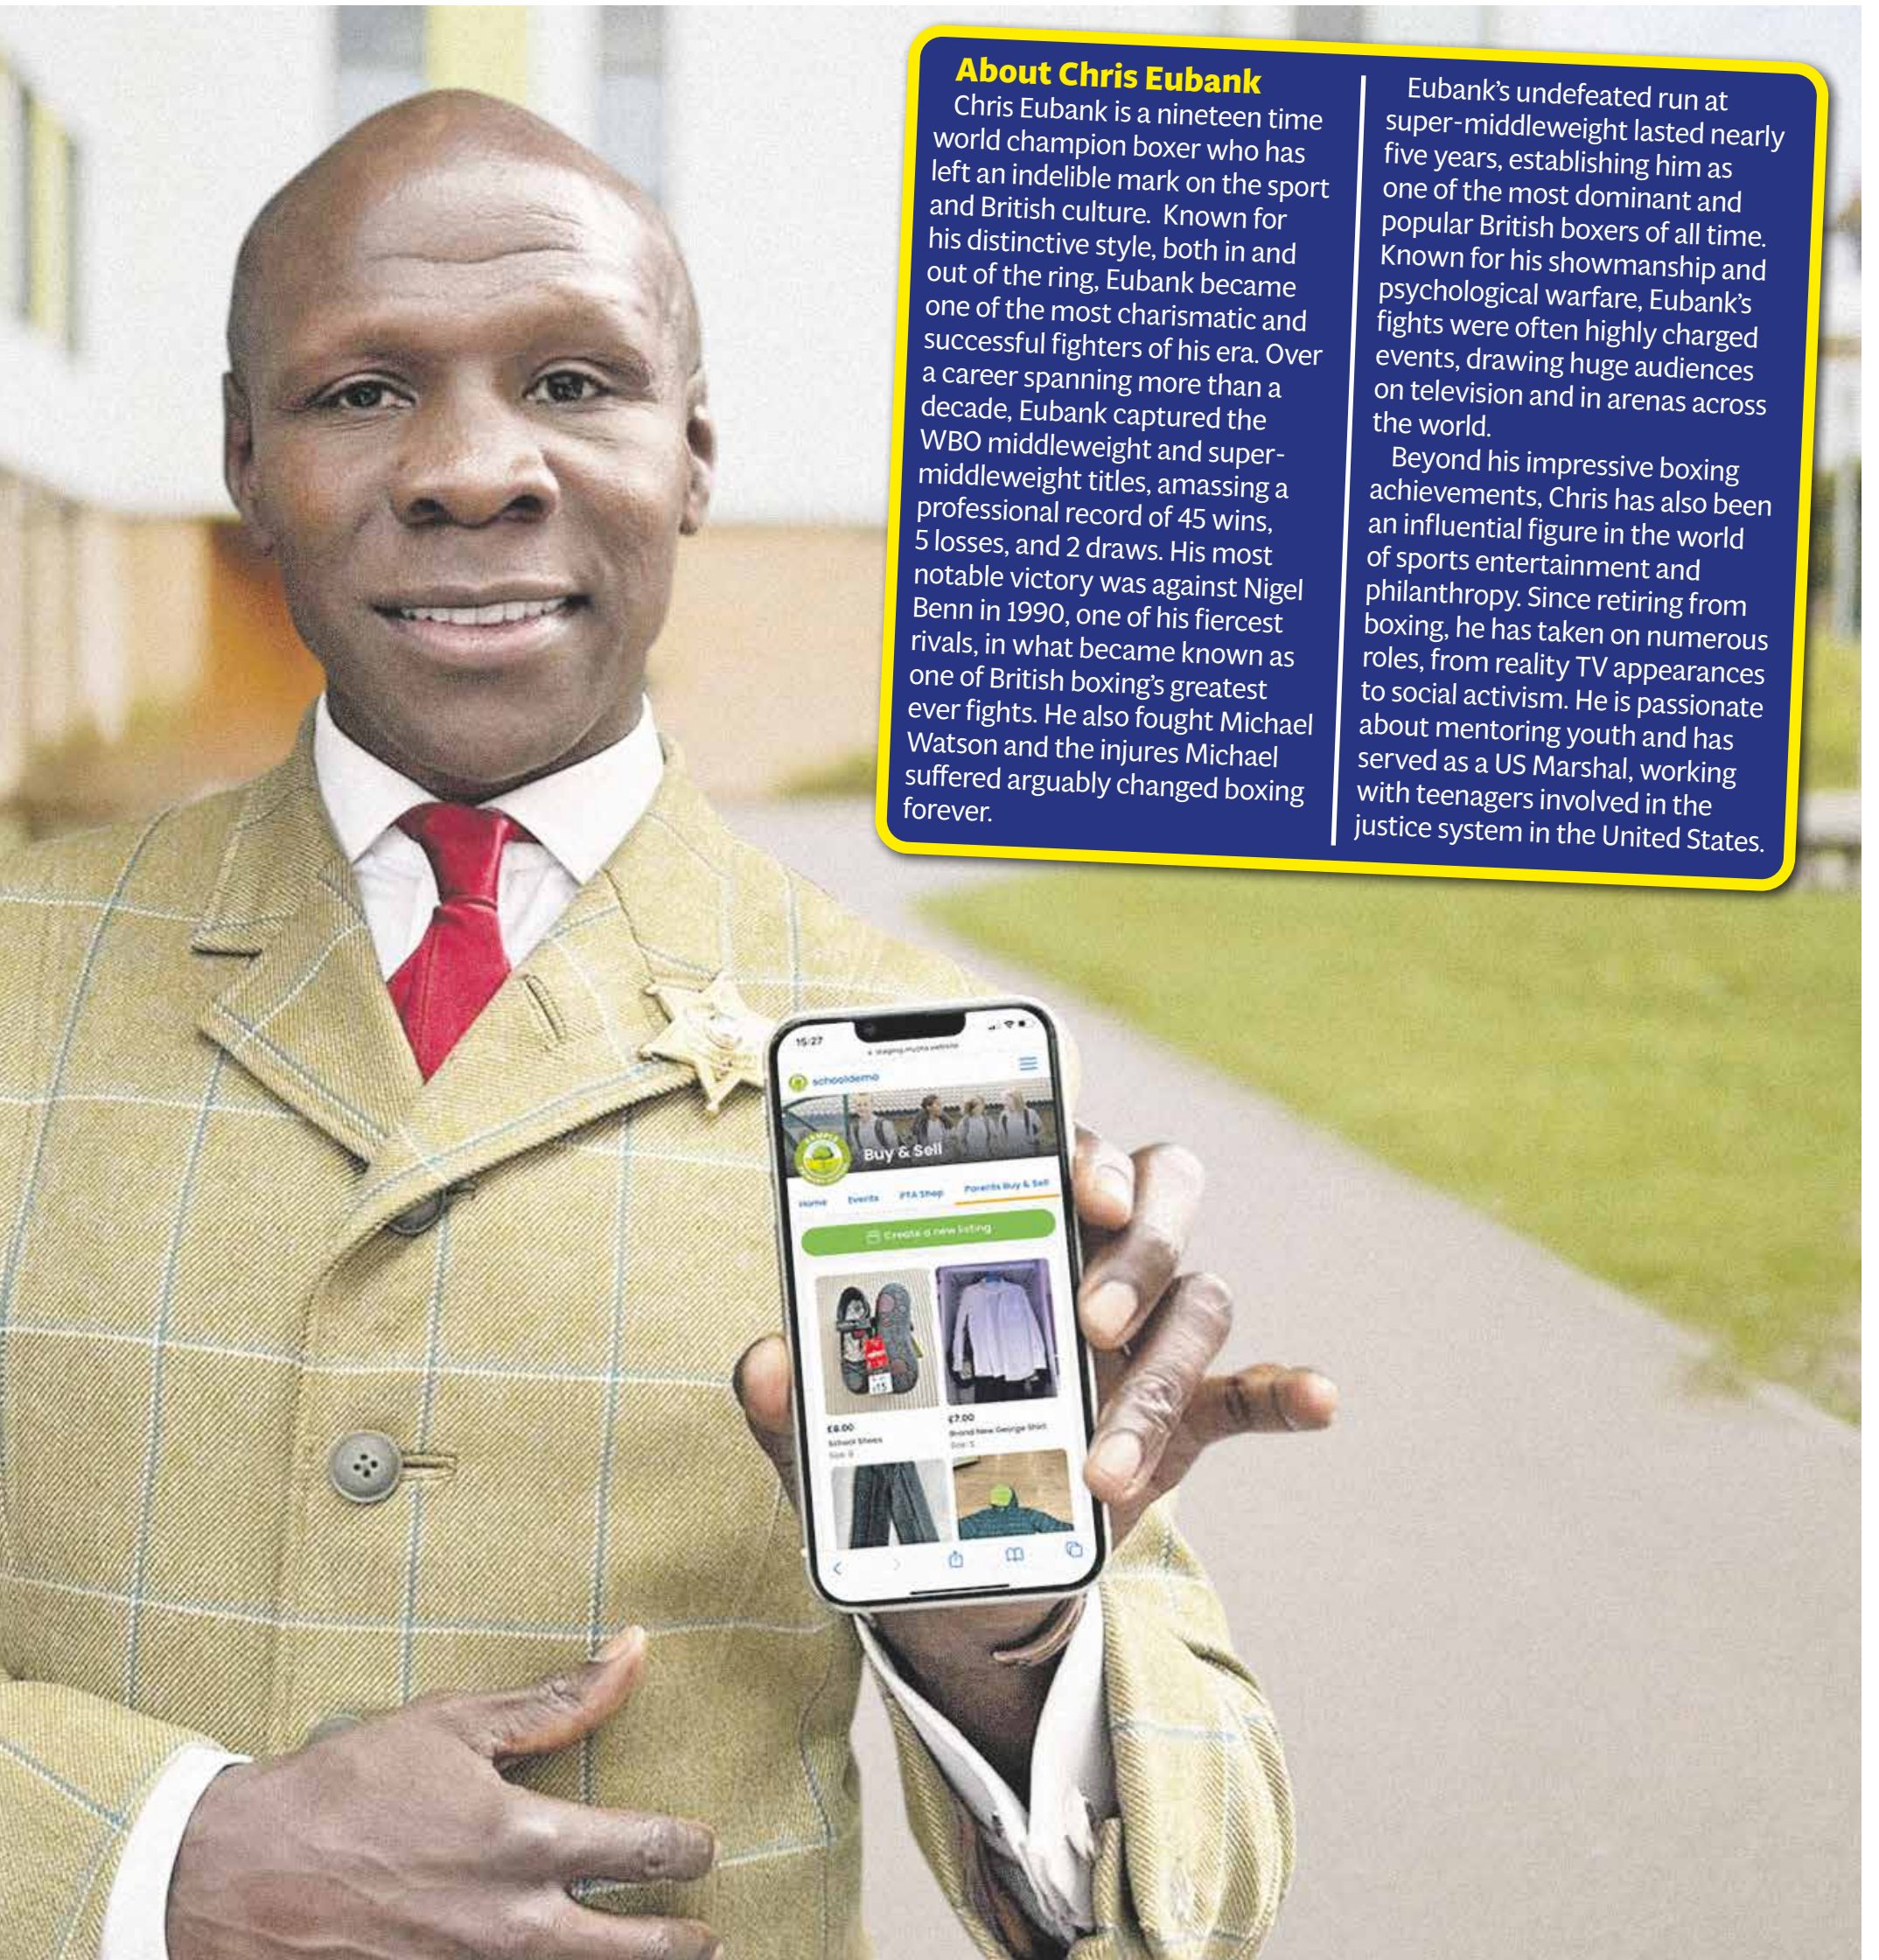

It can organise events and sell tickets for community facilities or causes as well as collect payments online. It also manages memberships and subscriptions with ease.

Trust Huddle allows members to buy and sell pre-owned and unwanted items, with a percentage donated to the community. It can sell locally donated or branded items with all online payments secure using Stripe.

"Trust Huddle isn't just about keeping people connected—it's about helping communities soar," Eubank added. "Whether you're managing a sports club, a charity, or a social group, this platform brings your community to life and makes fundraising effortless. The future is here."

About Chris Eubank

Chris Eubank is a nineteen time world champion boxer who has left an indelible mark on the sport and British culture. Known for his distinctive style, both in and out of the ring, Eubank became one of the most charismatic and successful fighters of his era. Over a career spanning more than a decade, Eubank captured the WBO middleweight and super-middleweight titles, amassing a professional record of 45 wins, 5 losses, and 2 draws. His most notable victory was against Nigel Benn in 1990, one of his fiercest rivals, in what became known as one of British boxing's greatest ever fights. He also fought Michael Watson and the injures Michael suffered arguably changed boxing forever.

Eubank's undefeated run at super-middleweight lasted nearly five years, establishing him as one of the most dominant and popular British boxers of all time. Known for his showmanship and psychological warfare, Eubank's fights were often highly charged events, drawing huge audiences on television and in arenas across the world.

Beyond his impressive boxing achievements, Chris has also been an influential figure in the world of sports entertainment and philanthropy. Since retiring from boxing, he has taken on numerous roles, from reality TV appearances to social activism. He is passionate about mentoring youth and has served as a US Marshal, working with teenagers involved in the justice system in the United States.
